

Introduction

Located in the coast of south Sea along Guangdong Province, Shenzhen covers an area of 2,020 square kilometres and owns the population of 4.05 million people. The climate here belongs to sub-tropical maritime, with the average temperature 22. Shenzhen, under the guidelines of Mr. Deng Xiaoping, became the first Special Economic Zone in China. After 20 years development, Shenzhen has established itself as one of main economic centers in China and has laid the foundation to support a new phase of further growth. The scenery attractions are characteristic of localization, nature and culture.

As an important foreign trade and international exchange port in China, Shenzhen made the brilliant achievements in the urban construction and boasts the city with a fine environment for both investment and tourism. Shenzhen has been elected as "Gardens city of State" and "the model city in environment protection". In Nov 2000, it was elected as "International Garden City" in Washington, the capital of the US. Shenzhen Special Economical Zone was established in 1979. With its rapidly development in economics, the tourism industry of Shenzhen has become bloomed. Especially in the period of eighth and ninth five-year plan and during the creation activity of best tourism city, Shenzhen's tourism has been stepping on the road of systemization and standardization. The stage of tourism of Shenzhen is coming up higher and higher. And the environment of tourism industry has become consummated. In former days, the tourism in Shenzhen, a small border town, she, Shenzhen special Economic Zone is a magic land. For the time being, there gave built more than 50 scenery attractions with different styles, 139 star-ranked hotels, 46 travel agencies, and 1,000 large commercial retail networks. When you walk around this garden city, you will find her so much impressive for her modern styles, appeal and panorama of views.

Shenzhen has six districts including Luohu, Nanshan, Futian, Baoan, Longgang and Yantian, among which, Futian, Luohu, Nanshan and Yantian District are within the SSEZ.

Here, we also call Shenzhen as middle area (Luohu and Futian), west area (Nanshan), east area (Yantian and Longgang) so as to introduce "Travel in Shenzhen" to the friends of China and abroad. We hope you will feel it convenient and comfortable during your travel.

More Tourist Attractions

Splendid China

Situated along Shenzhen Bay, the park covers an area of 300,000 square meters. It is one of the world's largest miniature scenic spots, reflecting China's natural landscape and cultural history.

China Folk Culture Villages

Covering 180,000 square meters, it is one of the four well-known tourist attractions of the city's Overseas Chinese Town (OCT) and the first in the country to blend folk cultures and the architecture of all nationalities in China.

Window of the World

Situated on the south side of Shennan Thoroughfare and along the Shenzhen Bay, it occupies an area of 480,000 square meters. It collects wonders from around the world: historic sites, natural landscapes, folk architecture, sculptures, paintings, folk singing and dancing.

Happy Valley

A member of the new generation of theme parks set up by the OCT, it offers unusual and adventurous activities.

Evergreen Resort

Located along Moon Bay near Mount Dananshan, it covers 200,000 square meters and is Shenzhen's first sightseeing farm, featuring its simplicity and rural setting.

Fairy Lake Botanical Gardens

Located in Liantang, Luohu District, it is home to Hongfa Temple, one of the largest in Guangdong Province. It has set up many gardens focusing on different plants and has more than 3,000 varieties. The late leader Deng Xiaoping planted a Banyan Tree in the garden in 1992.

Honey Lake

Situated in the west of Futian New City Center and neighboring Shennan Thoroughfare, the resort blends recreation with sightseeing, boasting a world-class water park.

Shenzhen Safari Park

Covering 120,000 square meters and situated by Xili Lake, the park is the country's first subtropical garden displaying wild animals, plants and natural history.

Shennan Thoroughfare

Stretching westwards for 20 kilometers along the 26-kilometer-long Shennan Thoroughfare is a parkway. Every intersection and building along the road are carefully decorated with plants and flowers.

Binhai Thoroughfare

The 9.6 km road is parallel to Shenzhen Thoroughfare, flanked with coconut trees and fascinating sea views.

Golden Beaches in the East

With Dameisha, Xiaomeisha and Xichong beaches threading along its coastline, eastern Shenzhen is a combination of green mountains, blue sea and golden beaches. It is being built into a recreational and tourist resort to appeal to holidaymakers. The Dameisha Beach Park is open to the public free of charge.

Shenzhen Waterlands Resort

Located in the hi-tech, high-yield and high-returns agriculture base in Bao'an District's Shajing Township, the resort has a distinctive sea view and rural scenery. This has made the area another natural resort, covering an area of 20 square kilometers.

Diwang Mansion Top-floor Sightseeing

The 384-meter-high Diwang Mansion and 360-meter-tall SEG Building are Shenzhen's two highest tourist attractions.

Minsk World

Opened on May 10, 2000, Minsk World was transformed from the world's fifth largest aircraft carrier into a military-themed tourist attraction. Located at Dapeng Bay, Shatoujiao, the Minsk was originally built by the former Soviet Union.

Places of Historical and Cultural Interest

Shenzhen is home to over 40 protected historical and cultural sites, including Zhongying Street, Dapeng Fortress, Hakka buildings and Tainhou Temple.

Dapeng Fortress

A historic site under State protection, the fort is located in Pengcheng Village in Dapeng Township, Longgang District. Built in the Ming Dynasty, it has survived for over 600 years.

General Lai Enjue's Cemetery

The cemetery is situated in Wangqitang, Dapeng Township. General Lai was originally buried in Dakengshang Village and his tomb was removed here in the third year ruled by Emperor Guangxu in the Qing Dynasty (1644-1911).

Hehu New Building

Built in the 56th year ruled by Emperor Qianlong in the Qing Dynasty, this building is located in Luoruihe Village in Longgang Township, Longgang District. It took three generations 22 years to finish the building, which is among best-preserved Hakka-style residential buildings in Guangdong.

Wenwudi Palace

Situated in Pingshan Township, Longgang District, it is the best-preserved palace of its kind in the city.

Nantou Ancient City

Situated in Jiujietou Village in Nanshan District, it is testimony to Shenzhen's ancient civilization and history and is praised as a common historical resource shared by Shenzhen and Hong Kong.

Boundary Stones of Zhongying Street

A historic site under provincial protection, the eight boundary stones are located in the middle of Zhongying Street in Shatoujiao Township, Yantian District, where Shenzhen and Hong Kong meet. They bear witness to the occupation of Chinese territory by British colonists following the Opium War.

Health

Hospitals

Shenzhen People's Hospital

Located in the northwest to Yayuan Interchange, it is the largest comprehensive hospital in Shenzhen with advanced equipment, medical talents and first-grade technology, focusing on medical, preventive, recreational and recovering treatments.

It has a total area of 90,400 square meters and construction area of 130,000 square meters with 1000 beds.

2nd Shenzhen People's Hospital

Located at the foot of Mountain Bijia and the northwest of Huaqiangbei Interchange, the hospital (originally called Shenzhen Red Cross Hospital) has become a comprehensive one with advanced equipment, medical talents and first-grade technology. It is the center of Shenzhen's blood research and Chinese-Western medical research.

It has a total area of 58,000 square meters with 1,100 beds.

Beijing University Shenzhen Hospital

Invested by the Shenzhen Municipal Government with 430 million yuan, the hospital is located in the north of Mountain Lianhua Park and east of Xinzhou Road with a total floor space of 56,000 square meters and construction area of 78,000 square meters. It was put into use in December 1999 and had the name from the original Shenzhen Central Hospital on September 26, 2001. Subject to the management of Beijing University. It has first-grade medical equipment and specified in various medical fields such as blood, heart and brain disease and reproduction medical research.

Futian Traditional Chinese Medicine Hospital

Located in Fuhua Road in Futian District, it was established in 1975 and became a model Chinese medicine hospital at a provincial and national level with medical, teaching, preventive, recreational and recovery functions. It has a total medical area of 35,000 square meters.

Medical in Shekou

Hospital

The Shekou Union Hospital (Gongye 7th St., Ph.26692314 - 2kms from SeaWorld) provides good outpatient, inpatient and emergency services care albeit you need to have a Chinese speaker with you. Although the cost of care and accommodation is very low in Chinese hospitals many foreigners elect to go to Hong Kong for inpatient care as English is much more widely spoken and the medical procedures are more of a western nature.

SOS

The SOS clinic is nearby the Jing Shan apartment complex and currently has two international doctors on staff. It provides quality family medical service for outpatients and operates on a subscription basis. SOS can provide referral information for inpatient care in Hong Kong and also arrange evacuation there for members.

Culture & Education

Culture Centers

Shenzhen began to implement the strategy of "building a culture-based city" to make it a city of high-quality culture in 2004. The culture industry has been booming since then, grossing a total added value of 16.339 billion yuan, accounting for 4.77 percent of the city's total GDP and rising 20.76 percent from the year earlier period.

Culture and Arts

Cultural undertakings never lost their momentums. The city currently boasts 10 artist associations and 19 professional artistic organizations, with more than 3,000 cultural and literary professionals. A batch of cultural festival brands have been established, including Shenzhen Grand Theater Arts Festival, the international biannual exhibition of Chinese wash paintings, the international biannual piano contest as well as the season of domestic and overseas select performances. The Grand Theater arts festival had been held 13 times and has become a grand and elegant arts event. Regular municipal cultural events include the biannual Shenzhen Golden Autumn Community Cultural and Arts Festival, the children's arts festival and the annual reading month.

In 2004, the city's cultural sector obtained 580 prizes above provincial levels, including 52 international prizes and 227 national ones. The Fifth Reading Month attracted more than 5 million people. The city's cultural circle gave 283 internal performances in the year and 316 performances were staged to the public. Cultural centers at all levels held 571 exhibitions and organized 2,343 mass cultural activities.

ICIF (International Cultural Industry Fair)

ICIF is China's only State-level cultural industry fair. The first fair opened on November 18, 2004 and last five days. More than 102 enterprises from 50-plus countries and regions attended the fair, which was reported by 161 overseas media with 1,053 journalists. The fair attracted 500,000 visitors from all over the world and achieved the goal of building a platform for presenting, trading and exchanging information on cultural products.

'Plaza Culture'

In July 1986, a makeshift stage made of bricks and cement was set up in the Children's Activity Center on Hongli Road for a novel show, in which admission was free for audience while performers had to pay 0.5 yuan. It is a talent show where any audience member can give a performance on stage. In the past years, more than 20,000 shows and 6,200 activities had been given on the stage.

There were performances almost everyday on the city's about 200 squares.

Cultural Venues

There were 480 dancing and singing venues and 134 get-together recreational houses in 2004. There were nearly 5,000 cultural venues with more than 100,000 employees and an output of 20 billion yuan. The Shenzhen Performance Corporation has established its brand.

Press and Publications

Shenzhen is one of the country's leaders in press and publishing. The city boasts 14 newspapers and 40 magazines, had one comprehensive publishing house, three audio/video publishers, as well as 88 correspondent offices of mainland and Hong Kong journalists.

The city published 821 kinds of books and 828.07 million copies of papers in 2004.

The Shenzhen Press Group has a variety of newspapers and magazines, including the Shenzhen Special Economic Zone Daily, Shenzhen Economic Daily and Hong Kong Commercial Daily, with 5,000 employees and a total assets of more than 5 billion yuan. The group is one of China's largest press groups with highest modernization level and strongest business power. Its turnover in 2004 exceeded 2.6 billion yuan, with a net profit of 160 million yuan.

Printing Industry

Shenzhen is one of the country's major printing bases. It is among the leaders in general design, production scale and strength, printing equipment and technology, enterprise management and product quality.

There were more than 1,580 printing enterprises, with more than 120,000 employees and 7 billion yuan in registered capital. Shenzhen Artron Colour Printing Co., Ltd. won a Benny Award, known as the "Oscars in Printing."

Broadcasting, Television and Film

Shenzhen has a complete product line of the broadcasting and TV industry. It has one radio station, two TV stations, two radio-and-TV stations and 20 cable TV stations. The radio and TV networks have covered the city's whole population. The digital TV channel was formally launched in 2005.

Relics and Museums

Shenzhen is rich in historical sites. More than 500 relic sites have been discovered, including 118 protected sites of historical importance, one at national level and 10 at provincial level.

The Dapeng Fortress was listed in the national heritage protection list, while Pengcheng Village in Dapeng Township was among China's earliest villages of historical and cultural importance. The excavation of Shang Dynasty (1766-1122 B.C.) tombs at Wubeiling Village, Nanshan District, was among the nation's top 10 archaeological findings in 2001.

Apart from a government-run museum, There are 16 private, collective and public-private-cooperative museums. The museums had more than 40,000 antique items and showcased 24 exhibitions.

Cultural Exchanges with Other Countries

The city has launched many activities for international cultural exchanges, such as the Shenzhen Grand Theatre Arts Festival, Shenzhen International Folk Culture Festival, Shenzhen Biannual International Wash Painting Exhibition, Happy Valley International Magic Festival and Asian Children's Arts Festival.

'City of Piano'

Local musicians have earned the city a fame in many international piano contests. Li Yundi won first place in Chopin International Piano Contest, becoming the first gold winner in the reputable event in 13 years. Chen Sa and Zhang Haochen also made their names in international piano competitions. With Shenzhen Art School as a leading exponent, Shenzhen's piano education has been in the leading place in China. Famous pianist Professor Dan Zhaoyi has fostered world-class piano players, earning a reputation worldwide. Piano art enjoyed a wide popularity among local primary and middle school students. Shenzhen's piano possession rate is very high among cities, with 8.2 pianos for each 100 households. A number of pianists have settled down here.

'City of Design'

Inspired by Hong Kong's design industry, Shenzhen's design sector has gradually shown some edges. Shenzhen boasts a large number of influential designers from all over the world. Plane designers like Chen Shaohua, Han Jiaying and Zhang Dali are well-known in the national circle. China's bidding symbol for Olympics was designed by Shenzhen artists and a large quantities of works given thumbs-up in the national and international circles were produced in the city.

Base of Animation

Shenzhen is one of China's animation bases and earliest in processing overseas cartoons. In the mid 1980s, inland area's first Hong Kong-invested animation company, Jade Animation, was set up in Shenzhen, hiring more than 70 percent of the country's creators at its peak time, and producing a large number of cartoon films for the country and world.

Thanks to its booming animation industry, Shenzhen has become one of the world's most important manufacturing bases of video games, with its low cost and strong production capacity in cartoons, two- or three-dimensional cartoons and game software. A simple OEM maker for American and Japanese at the beginning, Shenzhen has now started to create works by itself, filling China's blank in three-dimensional cartoon films and making a historic breakthrough in national animation industry.

Shenzhen was home to more than 500 enterprises creating and producing animation works, employing nearly 10,000 staff and achieving several hundred millions of output value each year. Shenzhen Polytechnic offers a major in animation.

Dafen Painting Village

Located in the Buji area in Longgang District, the village covers 4 square kilometers. A Hong Kong painting businessman Huang Jiang came to settle down in the village in 1989 with dozens of painters.

They rent houses for making and selling paintings, a business soon attracting more painters to the village. Currently there are 305 businesses here, with more than 3,000 painters and 700 workshops.

Its sales volume surged to a record 140 million yuan in 2004, a great success in introducing Chinese cultural products to the world.

Libraries

Shenzhen has eight public libraries, including four national first-class ones. The per capita coverage of libraries and books exceeded the national and provincial standards. There are more than 500 decent libraries in the Yuancun area in Bao'an District.

Shenzhen has four levels of public library networks. In 2004, there are 385 community libraries reaching required standards, a great boost for achieving the goal that there should be one community library for every 15,000 people. Municipal and district libraries enjoyed an increase of 600,000 books in collection, with a total collection of more than 7.59 million. Shenzhen Central Library was opened to the public in 2006 and a 20,000-sqm new library in Longgang District has been established. Culture authorities said all the six districts will each own at least one city-level library.
